

Urban Hiking (verb): taking a walk through your neighborhood or city with a sense of adventure! Explore the urban environment around you by wandering through parks, visiting landmarks and cool buildings, and appreciating the connection between city and nature. This is not intended to be a group activity. Please remember to follow social distancing guidelines from the CDC.

How to get ready for your adventure:

Step 1: Plan your route. Use Google Maps to locate green spaces, landmarks, or anything else you want to explore within walking distance of your house. Plan your route and get excited about what you're going to see along the way. Remember to choose roads that aren't too busy so you can focus your senses on your hike.

Step 2: Dress and pack appropriately. Check the weather forecast, then grab a jacket, hat, and sunglasses if you need them and don't forget your sunscreen! Put a water bottle and a snack in your bag and hit the pavement!

Ways to add adventure to your hike:

- Sing a hiking song. Sing a Girl Scouts hiking song while you explore your neighborhood. Here's a link to great songs to learn and sing as you walk: <https://www.youtube.com/user/GirlScoutSongs>
- Find nature all around you. Take breaks to look up at the sky, watch the clouds, feel the sun on your face, and listen to the birds. Wander through the green spaces and parks you find and see what trees, grasses, bugs, and critters live there. Notice differences and similarities between each green space you visit.
- Write in a journal. Journaling is a great way to record your experiences and observations as you learn new things about your neighborhood.
- Learn about your town's history and culture. As you walk around you might find old buildings and landmarks that you've never noticed before. Write about what you find and look it up when you get home. When was your city founded? Who used to live in your area? What traditions/buildings/businesses still remain and what is different now?
